3. Module description
Description	The student gets the knowledge concerning the basis of the phonetic and phonological description of English. Thanks to that, s/he can describe the articulation of English vowels and consonants. S/he can describe differences between British and American pronunciation, and phonological processes characteristic for English. Also, the student learns how to describe English in terms of morphology, thanks to which s/he can describe the basic morphological and syntactic terms and processes from this area.

Prerequisites	No preliminary requirements.
